

LSE - 12 Information systems and organizations

About this unit

The BSc Management program (Standard Route) consists of twelve units and you can study four units per year (see below the lists of the Foundation and Further units).

Here next you can read some details of this unit and then shortly about studies generally.

Information systems and organizations

Exclusion

This unit may not be taken with unit Introduction to information systems.

Aims and objectives

This unit studies information systems in organizations.

The first part of the unit identifies three models of information system design - focusing on data processing, decision making and transaction costs - and explores their organizational implications.

The second part of the unit deals with a critical revision of the key concepts of strategy, technology infrastructure and implementation issues.

The specific aims of the unit are:

- to provide students with the fundamental concepts needed for understanding information technology in organizations from information systems theory, organization theory and economics perspectives
- to introduce students to some new, critical ideas in management thinking related to the use and implementation of information technology in organizations.

Learning outcomes

On completion of this unit and relevant readings, students should be able to:

- discuss the organizational implications of ICT deployment;
- critically appraise the validity of concerns expressed in particular cases of ICT choices, their merits, shortcomings and feasibility of implementation;
- identify and discuss the merits and shortcomings of the major theoretical perspectives that inform the design and deployment of ICT in organizations;
- understand technical innovation as a process involving both technology development and organizational change;
- describe the actions and interventions that are associated with ICT strategies.

Generally about the studies:

Tuition to the LSE Management program

Once you have registered and received your study material from London School of Economics you are on your own until the examinations take place. Yet to structure your own time and studies can be difficult.

That is why MKFC Stockholm College offers you tuition so you can get the most out of your external studies at London School of Economics.

MKFC Stockholm College is using an e-learning platform that makes it easy for every student to follow the syllabus, receive tuition and interact with other students no matter where in the world the student may be.

Each student will also get individual teacher feedback and tuition during ten months per year. Our goal is to improve the skills through tuition so the student passes the examinations and receives a degree from one of the finest universities in the world within the planned timeframe.

The aim of the range of units available is to look analytically and critically at management issues, whilst developing your logical reasoning abilities. As a student you will develop critical skills for a wide range of real world professional situations, as well as get excellent preparation for a career in management consultancy or general management.
